Re: Its Your Domain

Dear Messrs. Jeffrey and Lewis:

It recently came to our attention that Its Your Domain, a self-described wholesale registrar, has been registering a large volume of domain names and then canceling the registrations within the five day cancellation period. We write to formally request that you look into this practice and insist that it stop.

At the least, it appear Its Your Domain is abusing its position as a registrar in general and VeriSign's systems specifically, while misrepresenting the truth about the number of domain names being registered on a daily basis. At worst, it appears they are engaging in sham transactions for their own financial gain, while taking advantage of their trusted position as an accredited registrar to do so. This could be considered a breach of their agreements with both ICANN and the VeriSign registry.

Furthermore, from what we can tell, it seems Its Your Domain is using these "temporary" registrations to drive traffic to their own advertising site, without having to pay for the registrations due to the five day refund period built in to the registration process. This is clearly not the reason the five-day refund period exists and Its Your Domain should not be permitted to abuse it.

Thank you for looking into this improper practice by Its Your Domain. We fully expect that once you both investigate this situation, you will find that Its Your Domain's practice is abusive and should be stopped.

Very truly yours,
